Gold shipments are steadily falling off in spite of the local rates of for eign exchange, which went up last week just as the Bank of England re duced its price for American gold. Only about $4,500,000 was shipped last week and the receipts from the interior were unusually heavy, as they need money to move the crops east there will probably be a tight ening in money before we get ours back from England in order to move the crops on to Europe. The prepa rations here are for a general tighten ing in the money market, and the de mand for time loans is general, while but little money is to be had for that purpose, though there is but little lack of call money, and the last bank statement showed that more loans had been paid than made. One reas on of this general disposition to clear the decks and sail close to the wind is the altered attitude of the Treas ury, which instead of standing ready with a great surplus to relieve a pos sible tight money market, is confin ing itself to refraining from disturb ing the twenty-eight million on de posit in National bank depositories, and talking seriously of extending a portion of the four and a halfs instead of redeeming the whole of them that fall due on September 1st.

Signs that Europe will want a good deal of our bread stuffs are constantly increasing. It is announced that the German Emperor will shortly hold a council to consider the reduction of the grain tariff to 2 1 2 marks. The French Chamber of deputies has already reduced the duty on wheat and flour for the year ending June 1 1892, and has ordered each fortified town in France to keep in store a supply of breadstuffs sufficient for two months ahead. It may be some time however, before Europe sends back our gold. Although she has about marketed her speculative American securities and is not trying to sell the American investments, she is not buying any more except in a spasmodic fashion. The result is that foreign bills are scarce in the market.-New York Press.
